Only the best cooks and waiters that can be secured will be employed at the Grand. Give the boys a trial.

There was an incipient snow storm on Sunday afternoon. It did not last long. Saturday and Sunday, May 17 and 18, of last year, were exact duplicates of the weather of yesterday and Saturday, with the exception that the wind on the 17th of May, 1902, was not quite so strong. A strong wind blew all day on Saturday of May 17, 1902, and snow fell on Sunday, the snow along the line of the Santa Fe between Ash Fork and Flagstaff, falling to a depth of several inches. A party of Prescott people who visited the Grand Canyon on that date will remember this occurrence of last year.

Senator W. A. Clark is making his periodical visit to Jerome. Employees of that camp had been apprised of his coming, and as in the case of several previous visits, a committee had been appointed to wait on him, immediately after his arrival. This committee was not accompanied by a band to play "The Conquering Hero," neither were they the bearers of bouquets. Instead they were a list of grievances which they wanted rectified. Mr. Clark met them smilingly and pleasantly in a courteous manner informed them that he could do nothing for them. While a strike was talked of it is stated that last evening it was decided not to order one.

The Eagles who went to Ash Fork yesterday to initiate a large number of new members, returned home this morning and reported a splendid time. They arrived in Ash Fork about noon and began the work of putting the young birds in the high nests about 2 o'clock and kept this up till the banquet was ready to serve at the Harvey house, which event took place at 6 o'clock. The banquet was a very good one and was enjoyed by all. After the banquet the remainder of the candidates were initiated, numbering twenty one in all, when dancing was enjoyed till about 2 o'clock this morning. The boys who were from the Harvey house were treated royally by the people at Ash Fork and the new flock of big birds whom they taught to fly.
